

Forgiveness scenarios

March Elem. week 5

Your friend tells everyone not to play with you at recess today. You are left alone to play.

Can you forgive them? How would you show them they are forgiven?

You are waiting for your mom to pick you up after school but she is running late. You are the last to be picked up and have to wait a long time.

Can you forgive your mom? How can you show her she is forgiven?

Your teacher says she is going to give you a prize today for all your hard work in class. A week has gone by and she hasn't given you the prize.

Can you forgive your teacher? How can you show her she is forgiven?

Your brother has touched your things again. This time he broke your favorite Lego creation. It took a week for you to finish it!

Can you forgive your brother? How can you show him he's forgiven?

Your dad says he is going to take you to a baseball game this weekend. When the day comes he tells you he has a big project at work he has to do and can't take you. You are extremely disappointed.

Can you forgive your dad? How can you show him he is forgiven?

You recently got a new set of pencils that are your favorite. You lose one of them at the same time your classmate has the exact same pencil. They say they didn't steal it but the eraser is chewed off just like yours was.

Can you forgive them? How can you show them they are forgiven?

You have a fight with a friend who is not playing fair. He gets upset with you and hits you hard. You are upset that a friend would treat you this way.

Can you forgive them? How can you show him he is forgiven?

You tell a lie to your mom and dad to keep from getting in trouble. You feel bad and eventually confess and tell the truth.

Can you forgive yourself? How can you know that you are forgiven?

Your baby sister is upset that you have taken the color of sidewalk chalk that she wants.

When you walk away she breaks all the sidewalk chalk so no one can use it.

Can you forgive your sister? How can you show her she is forgiven?

There is only 1 cookie left in the cookie jar. Before you can ask to split it, your friend eats the last one! You are shocked and disappointed.

Can you forgive your friend? How can you show him he is forgiven?